ON-Line: when you can do it!

12 Characteristics of Deliberate Homework (and Remote Learning)

a.k.a. HOW TO GET THEM TO DO ON-LINE WORK!!!

There are significant connections between learning, homework and remote learning. Join the conversation to discuss alignment between effective homework guidance and independent practice that occurs during remote learning or in-person learning. Three asynchronous sessions will facilitate

- exploration of relevant and actionable characteristics of homework
- reflection about current practices
- analysis of professional development tools that simplify the complex topics of deliberate homework and remote learning.

Let's enhance our capacity and belief in our abilities to collectively make homework and independent practice that occurs during remote learning or in-person learning, more meaningful and reasonable for students. I can't wait to continue this discussion with you.

Session 1

The connection between effective homework guidance and independent practice that occurs during remote learning or in-person learning

Deliberate homework and remote learning should be reasonable, meaningful, informative, and consistent.

What criteria guide decisions for assigning reasonable and meaningful homework?

Homework and remote learning should be reasonable regarding completion time, complexity, and frequency.

3 Step-by-Step Guides by Erik Youngman (3 PD Hours)

Session 2

Homework and remote learning should be meaningful regarding purpose, learning targets, learning mindset, format, and sequence

Session 3

Homework and remote learning should be informative regarding communication, feedback, and grading criteria.

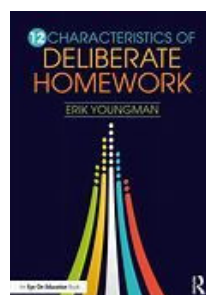

Homework and remote learning should be consistent regarding implementation.

Erik Youngman has been in educational leadership for 20 years. He is the Director of Curriculum, Instruction, and Assessment for Libertyville District 70 in Libertyville, Illinois. Previously, he served as a principal in Libertyville as well as an assistant principal and teacher in Gurnee, Illinois. He is the author of 12 Characteristics of Deliberate Homework.

Once you register, you will be given on-line access to all three one-hour sessions which you may view any time you can fit it into your schedule.

Who should attend? Anyone struggling to get students to complete homework/on-line assignments: teachers, teacher coaches, administrators, parents, tutors.

You will have the option of ordering Erik's Book.

Erik will be setting up Zoom "office hours" for on-line discussions the week of November 16th and January 25th.
