#932 CULTURE COUNTS: CONSTRUCTIVE LEADERSHIP THAT PROMOTES STUDENT SUCCESS

The best change comes from within. Coaching supports individuals to process information, navigate new or difficult situations and helps people find their resilience and capacity. When educational leaders empower teachers and students through coaching they are able to reflect, refine their thinking and reframe their practice so that meaningful and lasting change occurs. This is especially important in the upcoming months as we return to school after a year of unpredictability and change.

During this academy we will:

- Explore coaching fundamentals.
- Connect coaching with best practice.
- Connect the art of coaching with on-going support for staff development.
- Identify how coaching can improve performance and engagement for teachers and students.
- Create a plan to support teachers and students through coaching.

Robin Bruebach is the founder of Brave Reflections Coaching, LLC. During her 33 years in education, she worked with stakeholders through coaching, collaboration, differentiated instruction and professional development that helped each individual continue to learn and grow. Robin founded Brave Reflections in order to continue to support educational leaders, teachers and those who want to improve professionally. She earned her BS in Education from the University of Illinois and an M.Ed in educational leadership from National Louis University. She is trained in Cognitive Coaching™ and is currently finishing coursework to acquire an International Coaching Federation certification.
