

ENGAGING AND HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS BY ZEROING IN ON THEIR BELIEFS

OCTOBER 4, 2022 8:30 - NOON CDT - IN-PERSON & LIVE STREAMED
ROOM 105 NIU NAPERVILLE, IL
VIEWING FOR 60 DAYS ASYNCHRONOUSLY
WITH WEEKLY FOLLOW-UP BLOGS FOR 3 MONTHS

How do we help all of our students do the work of learning, with care -- as best they currently can? What lies at the heart of student motivation? For our students to flourish long-term and move toward mastery, they need to be motivated from the inside-out. Specifically, they need to believe five key things.

Credibility: I have a good teacher.

Value: This work matters to me.

Belonging: People like me belong in classes like this.

Effort: I can improve my knowledge and skills through effort.

Efficacy: I can succeed at the challenges this class presents.

Cultivating these five key beliefs, in the heart of each learner, doesn't mean becoming a miracle worker or a workaholic. Instead, it takes understanding how the beliefs work in the heart of a learner and what evidence-based strategies most efficiently help them to grow.

AS TAKEAWAYS PARTICIPANTS WILL:

- Understand how the belief spectrum works to help or hinder motivated student learning;
- Apply simple, robust methods for cultivating the Credibility, Value, and Effort beliefs in every classroom;
- Understand how motivation relates to engagement and why the difference can help us find efficiencies in the face of overwhelming demands on our time; and
- Leave with practical next steps for teaching and learning.
